

Abstract of the Disclosure

The present invention relates to a process for derivatizing supports or carriers, wherein a functional group is activated on a support surface by reaction with an activating reagent and then reacted with an amine component. The invention also relates to a support with a dendrimer structure on its surface and to the use of a support that has been produced according to the invention for binding biopolymers.

09856341-082701
T02280-1429860